Art Unit: 1743

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

4. Claims 1-5, 7, 9, 10-16, 18, 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Banet et al.

Banet teaches a method and apparatus for testing gases emitted by automobiles.

A sensor (col 3, lines 8-12) is provided in a car manifold or tailpipe (instant means for collecting and temporarily storing a gas sample), coupled to a microprocessor and wireless transmitter (col. 2, lines 50-59) for transmitting data to a host computer, e.g., web server, where the data is compared to EPA or other standards and a pass or fail message is transmitted to the user by electronic text, data, or voice message or Internet posting (Col. 3, lines 28-34, Figures 1 and 7). With respect to the gas analyzer being "electrically coupled" to the server, the analyzer is coupled by a wireless transmitter coupling as in the instant invention, see, e.g., instant claim 3. The coupled server and microprocessor constitute a network. Alternatively to the wireless coupling, a serial interface may be used (col. 3, line 3). Sensed analytes include hydrocarbons and oil is a hydrocarbon, thus it is the examiner's position that oil is tested for (col. 3, line 12).

5. Claims 6, 8, 10, 17, 19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Banet.

Banet fails to teach a printer or printing results or explicitly teach testing for oil.

It would have been obvious to provide a printer and print the results in order to provide and maintain a hard copy independent of possible data corruption in a computer system as was known in the art. With respect to the alternative rejection of claim 10, it would have been obvious to test for oil in order to determine if combusted or uncombusted oil is among the hydrocarbons emitted by an automobile because oil is a pollutant used in an automobile.

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
